EDUCATION

March 1999 – June 2002: PhD in Development Studies, Massey University, New Zealand with the concentration on social and human development. Topic of the dissertation: “Profiles and Dynamics of the Urban Informal Sector in Indonesia: A Study of Pedagang Kakilima in Bandung”. This study emphasises social and human development of the poor and analyses the ways in which the trajectory of development in Indonesia affects the poor who work in the urban informal sector. Situated in the context of Bandung, the third largest city in Indonesia, this study targets street traders, pedagang kakilima, to pursue three areas of inquiry: the economics of the street enterprises; human development of the traders; and coping strategies of the households. The data cover the period of economic crisis hit Indonesia, notably between 1997 and 1999. This allows the study to emphasise how the crisis – along with the processes of capitalist industrialisation and urbanisation – affected the activities and lives of street traders and how they coped with the problems they faced. This study ultimately outlines public/social policy alternatives to respond to such a phenomenon.

March 1993 – Dec 1994: Master of Science in Rural and Regional Development Planning, Asian Institute of Technology (AIT), Bangkok, Thailand with an excellent grade in the thesis examination on “the Roles and Performance of the Local Organisations in Poverty Alleviation Programmes: A Comparative Study in Selected Villages of Majalengka, Indonesia” as attested by copies of the letter of recommendation from Prof Ragnhild Lund and Dr B.W.E. Wickramanayake. Focusing on the issue of community development, this study is an attempt to identify contributions of local organisations in rural areas of Indonesia to the development of villages, especially in terms of poverty reduction programmes. It is assumed that the failure of the growth-oriented development in addressing the problems of poverty has called attention to mobilize local resources towards the involvement of local organisations in antipoverty initiatives. Even though several bottlenecks still hamper the performance of local organisations, the study revealed that local organisations play an important role in poverty alleviation programmes and serve as a supporting factor in the development of villages. This study recommends to up-date the existing poverty reduction programmes and enhance the effectiveness of delivering such programmes. It then highlights the need for generating economically productive activities and for greater popular participation.

1985 – 1990: Bachelor in Social Work, Bandung College of Social Welfare, Indonesia with the second best student award (amongst 332 graduates of the 1990 graduation) as attested by a copy of the letter of recommendation from Dr Irawan Soehartono. With the title “Social Control and Juvenile Delinquency in Roof tile Industrial Areas of Burujul Wetan, Jatiwangi of West Java”, the thesis examined the correlation between social control and the rate of deviant behaviour amongst young people. On the basis of social work perspectives, this study proposes recommendations to reduce juvenile delinquency and outlines roles that should be done by social workers.

July 2002 – the present: Senior lecturer at the Bandung College of Social Welfare. In this state college I teach four subjects for undergraduate students: (a) Social Planning and Social Policy; (b) Special Topic on Poverty Alleviation; (c) Special Topic on Child Welfare and (d) Community Development and Community Organisation (COCD). Using English as a medium of instruction, in this school I also teach two subjects for special classes of international students from Papua New Guinea: (a) Social Problems Analysis and (b) Social Protection.

August 2002 – the present: Visiting lecturer at Pasundan University, Bandung. In this private university two subjects I teach for undergraduate students include: (a) Industrial Social Work and (b) Philosophy and Ethics in Social Work.

March – October 2010: National Consultant for UNICEF with Stephanie Delaney (International Consultant) in the Consultancy for Strengthening the Child Welfare Workforce Training and Professional Development Capacity of the Ministry of Social Affairs (KEMENSOS). This consultancy work aims to strengthen the national capacity for training and professional development in the child protection system through a review of the existing child welfare professional training system, development of various training modules and training of instructors as identified in the AWP for 2009 under the social welfare and alternative care component of the child protection program funded by the Australian National Committee. The need for this consultancy was already indicated in the HR Plan. The overall aim of this consultancy is to contribute to development of comprehensive child protection system through strengthening the training and professional development capacity of the Ministry of Social Affairs and improving the competency of child welfare and protection workforce. The specific objectives of the consultancy work are:

1. To conduct rapid review of existing training policies, curriculums and support the development of child welfare and protection workforce in-services training plan
2. Support the national and local government to adopt systems building approach to child protection through development of a comprehensive, user friendly systems based programming toolkit and TOT manual for child welfare services managers
3. Support the development user friendly and skills based training toolkit and TOT manual for designated child welfare and protection workers covering prevention, early intervention, child protective services and alternative care.

4. To strengthen the capacity of eight regional training centres to support policy changes and to effectively deliver training for child welfare managers and social workers through provision of TOT for instructors.

February – May 2010: Consultant and Team Leader of Plan International Indonesia for the project of Final Evaluation of CNSP Program in Indonesia. This evaluation was done by a team. The team consists of Edi Suharto, Ph.D (Social Policy and Child Protection Analyst) as team leader and is supported by three members with specific qualifications: Dr. Bambang Rustanto, M.Hum (Gender Specialist), Djuni Thamrin, M.SocDev (Social Protection Specialist), and Ajeng Purnama Pratiwi, S.IP (Rights-Based Approach Specialist). Following mid-term evaluation and successful identification of major actors from various issues handled, during 2008-2010 Plan managed to improve its CNSP programs in collaboration with a number of institutions. This final evaluation is aimed at achieving five objectives.

1. To assess mechanism and management of CNSP program implementation within Plan Indonesia, including quality of project partnerships in all area interventions and the network and coordination among NGOs, I/NGOs and GOs in national level and CNSP program areas.
2. To assess the effectiveness and efficiency of program prevention activities done in the urban and sending areas, empowerment, protection, rehabilitation and reintegration of CSEC, CiCL, abused children (men and women) in urban areas.
3. To assess the impact of the program on the awareness, capacity and sustainability of action of local government, NGOs and CBOs in order to support the implementation CNSP related policy and the capacity of children groups (men and women) to voice out their rights related CNSP issues.
4. To assess the impact of availability, development and enforcement of policy and law on CSEC, CiCL and child abuse (men and women) at CNSP program areas and national level. Fifth, to investigate the best practices and lessons learned of CNSP program for future intervention and learning purpose of Plan Indonesia and the program partners and its link to Community Based Child Protection (CBCP) Project. Using mixed participatory research methods, this evaluation employed observation, surveys, and in depth interviews including emancipatory self-assessments as well as the participation and the voice of children and their parents. Throughout the data collection process and analysis, gender differences and approaches were implemented using gender framework.

August – September 2009: Consultant of Plan International Indonesia for conducting Situation Analysis of Child Protection in Indonesia: a Case Study in Kebumen of Central Java and Timor Tengah Selatan and Sikka of East Nusa Tenggara (NTT). The analysis process was conducted in a period of six weeks and led by a consultant (Edi Suharto, PhD) assisted by two research assistants/data collectors (Dr Aep Rusmana S.Sos and Ajeng Purnama Pratiwi, Sip). It focused on the condition of child protection system on the village level, notably Central Java and NTT, where assisted areas of Plan International were located. This analysis employed a number of primary and secondary data collections and analysis techniques including desk review, Focused Group Discussions (FGDs), Strengths, Weaknesses, Opportunities and Threats (SWOT) analysis, as well as interviews and observations in the fields visited. The specific objectives of this situation analysis are:

1. To explore main issues (current and strategic issues) and its root causes of violence and abuse against children in Indonesia with a focus on Central Java and NTT.
2. To identify the gaps in the key child protection components of (a) addressing harmful attitudes, customs and practices; (b) government commitment and local capacity; (c) child participation, life skills and knowledge; (d) capacity building in communities and families; (e) essential services for prevention, recovery and reintegration; and (f) effective monitoring, reporting and oversight.
3. To review the work and capacity of Plan, NGOs, the government and other major players in this area. This objective focuses on analyzing factors of success and failure as well as changes and lessons learned of the work and capacity of Plan Indonesia and implementing agencies. The evaluated components include (a) orgaware: organizational structure, funding resources, evaluation, code of conduct, coordination, facilities; (b) humanware: numbers of training or capacity building activities being held, educational background of the staff, years worked; (c) infoware: networks, publication, strategic and sustainability plan; and (d) technoware: SOP, tools, database system.
4. To suggest program objectives that are most appropriate for Plan given the situation analysis, the work of other organizations and available resources. This recommendation will focus on policies, programmes and networking based on lessons learned from the analysis.

November 2008 – November 2009: Policy Fellow/Analyst at Local Government and Public Service Reform Initiative (LGI), Budapest Hungary. Each year LGI selects talented professionals from Asia, Central, East and South-East Europe and the former Soviet Union to participate in the one-year programme. LGI's fellowship programme supports practical policy reform in the region, builds the capacities of individuals who are well placed to influence policy, creates networks of multinational experts, and supports the mission of LGI. Through the Fellowship Programme LGI explores emerging or insufficiently studied policy issues relevant for the regions where LGI works. The one year project undertaken in this fellowship is "Local Taxation of the Urban Informal Economy in Indonesia: Opportunities and Challenges". The main objective of this project is to analyse the experience of selected local urban governments in Indonesia (i.e. Jakarta and Bandung) in collecting local government revenues (taxes, fees) from street enterprises. This comparative study can draw lessons and recommendations for effective taxing of informal economic activities that can be applied in other local governments in Indonesia and elsewhere.

June – September 2009: National Consultant for UNICEF. The title of the project is “Capacity Assessment of the Referral System and Documentation of Good Practice: an Analysis of the Capacity of the Overall Referral System and PPT/PKT (Pusat Pelayanan Terpadu/Pusat Krisis Terpadu, a Hospital-based Integrated Service/Crisis Center) in Indonesia. Led by two Consultants: an International Consultant (Nancy Peddle, PhD, a Founder and Volunteer of LemonAid Fund, Chicago) and a National Consultant, the assessment analysed gaps and strengths of the “overall referral system” which has two components: (1) The “Macro referral system” encompassed in the child protection laws and its supporting institutions (e.g. Ministry of Women Affairs, Ministry of Social Affairs, Police) nationally and at the provincial and district level (Jakarta, East Java, NTB, and Aceh). It is the framework that allows the services be they prevention, intervention or treatment to the children and families to work in a quality integrated fashion; and (2) “Micro referral system”, refers to the institutions, organisation, agencies (Jakarta, East Java, NTB, and Aceh) directly providing prevention and treatment (i.e. PPT/PKT, P2TP2A, LPA, etc) with child at the centre and that engages in activities and services with the intent to address child abuse, exploitation and trafficking according to the laws that have been laid out at the Macro level.

The assessment focuses on institutional environment, organization and individual capacities, as well as documenting good practice and innovative practices that could be replicated. The specific objectives of the project are: (1) Gap analysis of the macro referral system; (2) Gap analysis of the micro referral system; (3) Documentation of “good” or “innovative” practice; (4) Analysis of UNICEF support to the referral system. This assessment employed a number of primary and secondary data collections and analysis techniques including desk review, Focused Group Discussions (FGDs), interviews and observations in the fields visited.

August 2007 – December 2008: Consultant for Plan International Indonesia. The consultancy is mainly to conduct Mid-Term Evaluation of Children in Need of Special Protection (CNSP) Programme. The evaluation is firstly aimed at helping Plan Indonesia and NLNO to assess whether and to what extent the programme has indeed succeeded in bringing practices and lessons learnt from the former separate projects into one single programme concept and approach. Secondly, the evaluation aims to assess in what manner the project has been able to address more comprehensively and more strategically the issues of children in need of special protection. Thirdly, the evaluation aims to underline what should be done in order to ensure towards a more integrated approach at the end of the whole project cycle. Specifically, the objectives of the evaluation are to (a) Assess the progress of CNSP programme implementation against original planning; (b) Identify the roles played by the implementing partners; including Plan Netherlands, Plan Indonesia, local partners in programme implementation, government departments, etc.; and (c) Advise Plan Indonesia on how to improve quality of programme implementation in terms of relevance, effectiveness, efficiency, sustainability and impact.

October 2005 – July 2008: Director, Postgraduate School of Specialist Social Work, Bandung College of Social Welfare, Indonesia. My duties are Managing educational programme and planning of the programme, preparing and developing curriculum and required facilities, maintaining the quality of teaching, promoting the school to stakeholders, establishing partnerships with relevant institutions both in Indonesia and abroad.

January – December 2007: Special Expert (consultant) for Ministry of Social Affairs in developing and implementing PKH (Programme Keluarga Harapan), a conditional cash transfer scheme developed by Bappenas (National Board of Development Planning) in cooperation with the World Bank. This programme is currently implemented in twelve provinces of Indonesia (West Sumatera, North Sumatera, Nanggro Aceh Darussalam, Jakarta, West Java, Banten, Yogyakarta, East Java, North Sulawesi, Gorontalo, East Nusa Tenggara, and West Nusa Tenggara) and covers more than 700,000 poor households. PKH is at the forefront of a new thinking on social protection in Indonesia. PKH provides money to poor families contingent upon certain verifiable actions, generally minimum investments in children's human capital such as regular school attendance or basic preventative health care. PKH therefore hold promises for addressing the inter-generational transmission of poverty and fostering social inclusion by explicitly targeting the poor, focusing on children, delivering transfers to women, and changing social accountability relationships between beneficiaries, service providers and governments. As most conditional cash transfer shemes, there are two components associated with PKH: education and health/nutrition. For example, the education component consists of a cash grant targeted to primary school age children. The cash is granted on an individual per-student basis and is conditional on enrollment and attendance of usually 80-85 percent of school days. The grants are intended to cover direct costs (school fees and supplies, transportation costs) as well as opportunity costs derived from the income lost as a result of sending children to school rather than to work. Grants are higher for secondary school students than for primary school students.

January 2003 – 2007: Visiting lecturer at Langlangbuana University, Bandung. In this private university, I teach Policy and Programme of Social Welfare Development.

June 2005 – May 2006: Social Policy Expert for Galway Development Services International (GDSI), Ireland. The project: Strengthening Social Protection Systems in ASEAN. Funding agencies: European Union and ASEAN Secretariat. My duties are preparing and developing project proposal, organising and conducting research on socioeconomic issues and existing social protection systems in 10 ASEAN Member Countries (AMCs) (i.e. Singapore, Brunei Darussalam, Malaysia, Thailand, The Philippine, Indonesia, Vietnam, Cambodia, Lao PDR, Myanmar), organising regional workshop and presenting the research findings to the workshop participants, generating manual for strengthening social protection systems in ASEAN, preparing and submitting final report.

February 2003 – March 2004: International Policy Analyst, Open Society Institute, Central European University, Budapest, Hungary. The project: Integrating the Urban Informal Sector in the Public Policy Process: A Case Study of Street Enterprises in Bandung Metropolitan Region (BMR), Indonesia. Funding agencies: Centre for Policy Studies (CPF), Central European University, Budapest, Hungary and Open Society Institute, USA. My duties are Preparing and developing project proposal, attending three workshops in Budapest relating to open society missions, public policy, and project management, conducting research on the urban informal sector and the public policy process in Bandung, presenting research findings in the workshops, writing policy paper on how to improve participatory public policy making in the urban development planning, preparing and submitting final report.

November 2002 – April 2003: Consultant, International Labour Organisation (ILO), Jakarta. The Project: An Analysis of ILO-IPEC Partners' Capacity in Combating the Worst Forms of Child Labour in Indonesia. Funding agency: ILO, Jakarta. My duties are preparing and developing project proposal, conducting research on capacity mapping of ILO-IPEC's partners involved in combating the worst forms of child labours in six provinces of North Sumatera, Jakarta, West Java, Central Java, East Java, and East Kalimantan, presenting research findings, submitting final report.

August 2002 – October 2005: Director, Institute for Development Studies, Bandung College of Social Welfare. This non-for-profit institution focuses on three core areas of activities such as research, policy and empowerment. My duties are to lead the institution to undertake the projects those mainly supported by the Bandung College of Social Welfare, Ministry of Social Affairs, Ministry of Home Affairs, Ministry of National Education, provincial governments and such international agencies as ILO, UNDP, UNICEF. I was responsible for preparing and developing project proposals, establishing partnerships with government agencies, NGOs and international donors involved in social development, managing projects, monitoring and evaluating projects, preparing final reports.

September 2002 – September 2003: Supervisory team on the project of Neglected Children and Street Children in Bandung operated by Ministry of Social Affairs and Daarut Tauhid Islamic Foundation, Bandung. My duties are monitoring and evaluating the project, providing consultancy to the project team.

October 2002 – October 2004: Supervisory team of the project of Assisting Girl Street Children at Risk of Sexual Abuse supported by Ministry of Social Affairs and Asian Development Bank. My duties are monitoring and evaluating the project, providing consultancy to the project team.

1992 – 1997: Lecturer at the Bandung College of Social Welfare, and staff of Curriculum, Research and Development (CRD) division at the school. As a lecturer, I taught social and public policy analysis, and social work research; and supervised students conducting institutional practicum, fieldwork practicum (KKN) and final thesis. As a staff of CRD division, I was responsible for evaluating and developing the school's curriculum; designing and conducting research projects in such areas as social welfare issues, social problems, and social work education; and organising seminars, institutional practicum, and fieldwork practicum.

1995 – 1997: Visiting lecturer at Pasundan University, Bandung. In this private university I taught industrial social work and sustainable development/environmental impact assessment.

1995 – 1997: Vice director of the Institute for Development Studies (Lembaga Studi Pembangunan) of the Bandung College of Social Welfare. This non-profit organisation has collaborative relations with government agencies, non-governmental organisations and international agencies to plan and/or deliver development projects including research, training and community development projects. One of the projects that I was involved in was the Bandung Integrated Urban Energy Planning (BIUEP) sponsored by AEEMTRC (ASEAN-EC Energy Management Training and Research Centre). The primary aim of the project was to produce an integrated energy plan that comprehensively recognises the interrelationship between physical, economic, social and environmentally sustainable urban development.

1996 – 1997: Associate of Foundation for Sustainable Development (YPB), Jakarta. Sponsored by Leadership for Environment and Development (LEAD) and Rockefeller Foundation, this non-governmental organisation manages national and international training, workshops, and conferences on sustainable development issues. One event that I attended was the international conference and workshop in Costa Rica in September 1997.

RECENT RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

January 2009 – June 2009: Principal Researcher, Pemimpin Masa Depan dan Pembangunan Kesejahteraan Sosial: Aspirasi Orang Miskin di Indonesia (Future Leadership and Social Welfare Development: Aspiration of the Poor in Indonesia). This nationwide survey is aimed at identifying criteria of the next president of Indonesia in relation to social welfare policies based on the aspiration of the poor.

August 2007 – December 2007: Principal Leader, Mid-Term Evaluation of Children in Need of Special Protection (CNSP) Programme. Employing descriptive and qualitative approaches, this evaluation collected primary and secondary data through in-depth interviews, focused group discussions and desk review of literature and related documents. Fieldwork has been done in Jakarta and Surabaya to visit selected Plan partners. Two workshops has been done in Jakarta to present the research results to Plan Indonesia and Plan Netherlands as well as their partners.
